HOUSE AND GARDEN

IN THE MANNER OF PROVINCIAL FRANCE

Before deciding on the furniture for the new dining room, consider the several merits of French provincial types. This style grows increasingly popular, due largely to its adaptability to both town and country use. It is a favorite choice for the country interior on account of its comfort, grace and refreshing air of informality. In the city home, particularly the house or apartment of limited space, the nature of the French provincial type is equally desirable because many of the pieces are small in scale. Sketched today is a side wall in a dining room furnished in the manner of Provincial France. The walls are cream colored plaster ornamented with a stencil design of cherry trees in naturalistic colors. The trees are placed in the corners of the room with their branches curving toward the center to form a frame for the furniture groupings on the side walls. The furniture here is French provincial in character, particularly interesting being the sideboard. It has a cupboard at either end, but in place of being solid in the center portion, it is fitted with shelves on which may be placed colorful pieces of china. The simple decoration on the top consists of a pair of pottery bowls and a small French lantern of painted tole.

LEAVES FOR GARDEN BEAUTY

When gardeners speak of the beauty of their plants, most of them have in mind nothing but the colors and forms of the actual blossoms. Only a few will call your attention to any other phase of the loveliness which their borders present. It is undeniably true that the most striking features of the majority of plants are floral in character, but when one goes a little deeper into the subject one quickly finds hitherto unrealized beauty in the foliage. Apart from those species which are grown solely for the appearance of their leaves, such as Palms, Ferns, Coleus, Dracaenas and Crotons, many whose claim to attention is based on their flowers have an almost equal loveliness of foliage. The swordlike leaves of Iris and Gladioli, the silvery gray and the leafy green of the pink, the spreading fronds of Columbine and Meadowrue—these examples quickly come to mind. And for a less well known example of the claim, one could search long before finding a more delicate wholly delightful little leafy plant than that laid down by a European Poppy (P. caucasicum), a bird's-eye view of which is shown here.

Jury Acquits One Hermosa Banker

HERMOSA BEACH REVIEW
The jury in the case of E. J. Young, former president, and L. E. Spencer, former cashier of the National Bank of Hermosa Beach, acquitted Spencer and is said to have stood eleven for acquittal and one for conviction on the final ballot in the case of Young. It is generally believed that he will not be tried again. The case is off the calendar until December 3, at which time it will go on the calendar in Judge Young's court. The case against Young is naturally weakened by the action of the jury, which was out for nearly 28 hours. John R. Layng, assistant United States attorney, was in charge of the prosecution, and Troy Pace, of James, Smith, Pace & Younkin was counsel for both defendants. The charges against both the Hermosa bankers alleged misappropriation of funds, which, according to the contention of the defense attorney, totaled slightly more than $12,000.

BUILD AND LIVE IN TORRANCE

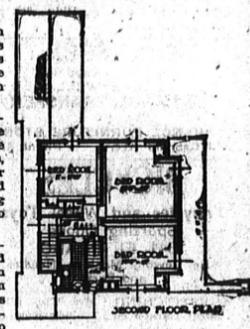

True Flavor of England's Famous Cotswold Section

By R. C. Hunter & Bro., Architects, New York

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

The ancient Cotswold section of England, centuries old, is famous the world over for its picturesque cottages and is the mecca of artists interested in domestic architecture.

The character of these old cottages allures and holds one spell-bound. Their picturesque roofs, chimneys and dormers, their well studied details, their pleasing variety of materials and textures and their soft blending color schemes leave nothing to be desired.

Of course, the plan arrangement of these charming old houses is not suited to modern American ways of living and in all cases where these old houses are used as models for the modern home it is necessary to evolve an entirely new layout of plan. To do this and yet retain the full charm of the old cottages demands the utmost skill on the part of the designer.

The house shown herewith is the result of a thorough first hand study of these old cottages, an appreciation of their merit and an understanding of their possibilities of adoption to modern American living.

Note the characteristic stone vestibule, the size and placing of the casement windows, the detail of chimney and dormer, all are authentic.

The plan layout is simple, direct and livable.

This house measures 44 feet six inches across the front and should have a lot with a frontage of not less than 55 feet.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-169.
